STUDY NOTES

Introduction

The University of Sindh, commonly known as Sindh University, is one of the oldest and largest public universities in Pakistan. Established in 1947 in Karachi, it was later relocated to Hyderabad and then to its current main campus in Jamshoro in 1951. It holds immense historical and cultural significance, particularly for the province of Sindh, serving as a major center for higher education, research, and the preservation of Sindhi culture and language. The university is recognized for its diverse range of academic programs and its sprawling main campus, which houses numerous faculties, institutes, and research centers.

Key Concepts

- Historical Foundation: Established immediately after the partition of the subcontinent, making it the first university in Pakistan.

- Academic Structure: A comprehensive university organized into faculties, institutes, and constituent colleges.
- Multi-Campus System: Operates a main campus in Jamshoro, an older campus in Hyderabad, and several satellite campuses across the Sindh province.
- Cultural Significance: Home to the Institute of Sindhology, a premier institution dedicated to the research and preservation of the history, culture, language, and heritage of Sindh.
- Research and Publication: A key contributor to academic research in Pakistan, with numerous research journals and centers.

Detailed Explanations with Examples

1. History and Establishment

- Founding (1947): The University of Sindh was established through the University of Sindh Act No. XVII of 1947. Its initial location was Karachi, the then-capital of Pakistan.
- Relocation (1951): The university was relocated from Karachi to Hyderabad. Over time, a new, purpose-built campus was developed in Jamshoro, a few kilometers from Hyderabad, due to the need for more space.
- Campus Development:
 - Allama I.I. Kazi Campus (Jamshoro): This is the main campus and the hub of all academic and administrative activities. It is named after the university's visionary Vice-Chancellor, Allama I.I. Kazi.
 - Elsa Kazi Campus (Hyderabad): Also known as the "Old Campus," this campus is located in Hyderabad city and hosts specific departments and evening programs. It is named after Elsa Kazi, a German writer and wife of Allama I.I. Kazi.

2. Academic Organization

The university is structured into several faculties, each comprising multiple departments, institutes, and centers.

- Faculties and Departments (Examples):

- Faculty of Natural Sciences: Includes departments like Chemistry, Physics, Mathematics, Computer Science, and Zoology. It is one of the largest faculties.
- Faculty of Social Sciences: Houses departments such as Economics, International Relations, Political Science, Sociology, and Social Work.
- Faculty of Arts & Languages: Focuses on languages and humanities, with departments like English, Urdu, and a particularly strong Department of Sindhi.
- Faculty of Commerce & Business Administration: Offers degrees in BBA, MBA, and Commerce, through the Institute of Business Administration (IBA), Jamshoro.
- Faculty of Education: A dedicated faculty for training teachers and education professionals, offering B.Ed., M.Ed., and doctoral programs.
- Faculty of Pharmacy: A well-regarded faculty offering undergraduate and postgraduate degrees in pharmaceutical sciences.
- Other Faculties: Include Islamic Studies, Law, and Engineering & Technology.

- Key Institutes and Centers (Examples):

- Institute of Sindhology: This is the university's flagship research institute. Its purpose is to study and promote the history, heritage, language, and culture of the Sindh region. It features a museum, a library with rare manuscripts, and a publication wing.
- Dr. M.A. Kazi Institute of Chemistry: A specialized center known for its advanced research in various fields of chemistry.
- Area Study Centre: Far East & South East Asia: Focuses on geopolitical and cultural studies of these specific regions.

3. Campus Network

To improve access to higher education across the province, the University of Sindh operates a network of campuses.

- Main Campus (Jamshoro): The primary center for all Master's, M.Phil., and Ph.D. programs, along with most undergraduate programs. It provides extensive facilities, including a central library, student hostels, sports grounds, and transportation.
- Satellite Campuses: The university has established additional campuses in various cities to cater to local students. Examples include:
 - Laar Campus at Badin
 - Mirpurkhas Campus
 - Larkana Campus
 - Dadu Campus
 - Thatta Campus

These campuses typically offer degrees in high-demand fields like Business Administration, Computer Science, and English.

Important Points

- Motto: "Read in the name of thy Lord who created." (From the Holy Quran)
- First University of Pakistan: Officially chartered in 1947, preceding others established after independence.
- Chancellor: The Governor of Sindh serves as the ex-officio Chancellor of the university.
- Vice-Chancellor: The chief academic and administrative officer of the university.
- Affiliating Body: The University of Sindh affiliates a large number of public and private colleges across the province.
- Institute of Sindhology: A unique and defining feature, making the university a global center for Sindhi studies.
- Location: The main campus is strategically located in Jamshoro, which is known as an "educational city" and also houses Mehran University of Engineering and Technology (MUET) and Liaquat University of Medical & Health Sciences (LUMHS).

Summary

The University of Sindh is a pioneering public university in Pakistan, founded in 1947. Its main campus is located in Jamshoro, with additional campuses across the province, making it a central pillar of higher education in Sindh. The university is organized into numerous faculties and research institutes, offering a wide array of programs from undergraduate to doctoral levels. It is particularly distinguished by the Institute of Sindhology, a world-renowned center for the preservation and study of Sindhi culture, language, and heritage. As one of Pakistan's oldest and largest universities, it plays a critical role in academic research, cultural preservation, and providing accessible education to a diverse student population.
